2. Citations and explanations

The claimed invention relates to a method and an apparatus determining the concentration of gas components in a closed space with at least one transparent, dielectric wall. An alternating high voltage is applied to the spacing and emitted light is collected.

The following documents are cited in the International Search Report:

D1: WO 9625658
D2: US 5198773
D3: US 5168323

Cited document D1 relates to a method and a device for determining the pressure of gases, especially in electric lamps. A high-frequency generator applies a high voltage over the spacing and at least one gas of interest is measured selectively. Two spectral lines are measured and a ratio is formed, from which the pressure of a gas is determined.

D2 relates to a method for determining the gas content of a glass window unit. A voltage is applied over the unit with plate electrodes.

The subject matter claimed in claims 1 and 10 does not differ from D1. Thus, the independent claims 1 and 10 are not novel.

The subject matter claimed in claim 11 differs from D1 in that the spacing is a gas-filled window glazing unit. It is considered to be obvious to a person skilled in the art to use the measuring method in D1 on window units in view of D1 and D2. Therefore, Claim 11 is not considered to involve an inventive step in view of D1 and D2. For the same reasons, claims 2 and 3 are not considered to involve an inventive step.

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of: V.

The subject matter claimed in claims 4 and 14 does not differ from D1. The subject matter claimed in claims 6-9 and 15-30 concern different technical solutions for collecting and transporting the emitted light. These claims are not considered to involve an inventive step in view of D1 and D2.

The independent claims 5 and 12 differ from D1 and D2 in that an elongated electrode is used to apply the high voltage over the spacing. Independent claim 13 differs from D1 and D2 in that the means for applying the high voltage comprises a conductive layer. The invention claimed in claims 5, 12 and 13 is considered to differ significantly from D1 and D2 and thus involves an inventive step.

According to the arguments stated above, the invention claimed in claims 1, 4, 10 and 14 is not novel and is not considered to involve an inventive step. The invention claimed in claims 2-3, 6-9, 11 and 15-30 is novel but not considered to involve an inventive step. The invention claimed in claims 5, 12 and 13 is novel and is considered to involve an inventive step.
